

The content of The Physician Network website is provided for educational purposes and is not intended to replace personal consultation with a physician regarding your medical condition, diagnosis, or treatment. Nor is the information provided in this site intended as a recommendation or endorsement of specific tests, products, procedures, and opinions.

Healthcare information changes continually with advances in medical research or specific physician preferences. Our website may not contain all of the most recent, complete or useful information at the time you access the site. Our website also provides links to other organizations as a service to our visitors. The Physician Network is not responsible for, nor does it specifically endorse, the information provided in other websites. Always seek the advice of your physician or other qualified healthcare provider if you have questions regarding a medical condition.